I am against CAFTA because NAFTA brought more poverty to the poorest workers in the world. Our factory workers lost their jobs when the factories moved overseas. Factory owners in foreign lands are pushed into paying ever-lower wages to workers by the CEO's of huge American businesses that want "deals" on cheaper products. The wealth economy does not trickle down, however poverty does flood upward. The U.S.A. as well as many other countries is experiencing an ever-growing gap between the rich and the poor. CAFTA would only add to that polarization. The results of this is increasingly unhappy, underfed, world citizens. This contrast between the have and have-nots will lead to even greater world instability and anti-American feelings. It is time that America lead in real democracy not by wars but by examples of sharing, caring, humane laws and increased fair wages. The riches companies should give the same dividends to its workers as to the shareholders as it is the non-management workers that are the base of their success.

CAFTA is not beneficial to anyone except the already super rich.

P.S. I also fear that CAFTA will be a way for companies to push gen. eng. needs & pending pesticides not allowed here, overseas.
